

In the centre of the old graveyard are the remains of an old church. The foundations of it are still visible and there are many old stones and slabs in the vicinity that presumably came from the church. This is probably the remains of a medieval parish church. The tomb of the well-known local landlord, Martin McDonnell, who died in 1872, lies in close proximity to the church at the highest point in the graveyard. A Celtic cross rises above this tomb and its inscription is in Irish. Some of the headstones in the cemetery date back to the early 1800s.

The old headstone that is legible in the old graveyard dates back to 1834. In the centre of this graveyard is the remains of an old abbey. The base of the old abbey is still visible. There are many old stones and slabs in the vicinity, which presumably came from the old church.

Several historical sites can be found close by, including a children's burial ground. 10 miles to the east is a hollowed stone known as Tober Patrick. Boyounagh was the old name for the present day parish of Glenamaddy.
